That is one EXTREME campfire!

Extreme Campfire Lights Up Storer; Finds Missing Moose

Special Days celebrated its return to Storer Camp with an opening campfire that introduced the week's "extreme" theme. Campers shook homemade tambourines, pounded bongos and clicked their rhythm sticks as the drumming circle, led by staffer Maggie, began.

The campers had several missions this evening: to find their missing moose, to perform a challenge that had been issued to them via "Treemail" earlier in the day, and to pack in as much spirited fun as possible!

A rousing rendition of "Moosa, Moosa" coaxed out a pheasant, a squirrel, a deer, and a duck, but no moose. Finally, grass-skirted counselors Tony and Rex led the campers in a successful round of "Moosa"; fireworks filled the sky, and the beloved moose appeared in a canoe, ready for tomorrow's kisses.

Extreme Joe then called upon the villagers to complete their challenges. The All Stars held their collective breath "under water" for 60 seconds! Every All Star survived and not a single one got wet.

Adventurers sang the days of the week in one breath as many times as they could, with Mishael reaching an all-time high of eleven rounds.

By having seven "chin people" singing the Tarzan song, the Trailblazers exceeded their challenge by one, but Jane still has a pain.

The Outbackers performed skits throughout the evening.

Through sheer determination and extreme coordination, the Voyagers, the newest Special Days village, began to build a name for itself as their entire village completed both lap-sit and a walk.

Perhaps the most difficult task faced by a village this evening was the one conquered by the Explorers, who were challenged to make every one of the stony-faced CIT's (Counselors-in-Training) fall out of their chairs laughing. Their fourth joke, a ripping knock-knock, went off the Joke-O-Meter scale!

"Rainbow Love" concluded the campfire, as each village made their way to the tennis courts for an ice cream sandwich and returned to their cabins for some extreme sleeping.
